THE REAL ESTATE MARKET

LOWER MORTGAGE RATES ARE NOW THE RULE.

There Is No Longer Any Difficulty in Getting Loans at 5 and 4 1-9 Per Cent., Which Were the Normal Rates Before the Recent Period of Cheap Money.

There is, no doubt, a considerable amount of liquidation still under way in the real estate market. Yesterday, for instance, the forced sales put through in the Vesey street exchange were far more numerous than the voluntary sales reported from brokers' offices. Nevertheless signs of improvement in market conditions are unquestionably multiplying.

Mortgage loans are no longer hard to obtain on the ordinary run of property at fair valuations, while interest rates in Manhattan have come down to 5 and 41/2 per cent. In many quarters it is believed that the value of money will be lower still before long. On this point, however, there is room for difference of opinion.

are identical with those current before the period of cheap capital which began about 1898 and ended about two years ago. This period was unique in the history of the New York mortgage market. The rates which prevailed then will in all probability be restored, for in the long run the general tendency of the local mortgage rates is admittedly downward. But it may well be doubted whether 4 and 4½ per cent. money will be the rule again in the very near future. The principal life insurance companies which a few years ago were such important if not altogether dominating factors in the mortgage loan market stand now on a different footing with respect to realty investments. They are not only prevented by law from participating through affiliated corporations in realty enterprises, but some of them have formally adopted the policy of lending their funds as far as possible in the localities whence the funds are derived. Thus instead of concentrating realty loans in New York they are distributing them throughout the leading cities of the country. be restored, for in the long run the genera they are distributing them throughout the leading cities of the country.

The abolition of the mortgage tax may in the course of time attract enough private capital to offset the loss of life insurance funds, but this will hardly occur so long as the railways are insistent borners. rowers at high rates.
In any event mortgage conditions are once more favorable to legitimate build-ing enterprises and a fair amount of con-struction work is being undertaken. struction work is being undertaken.

Lenders are cautious about financing operations in the flat and tenement districts, which are as a rule oversupplied with housing, but building loans for the erection of loft structures in the growing midtown mercantile section, of high class elevator apartment houses on the upper West Side and of two family houses in The Bronx am freely offered.

Interstate Commission Holds That Rates on Grain Products Are Excessive.

DOPTALO, July 22.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has decided in favor of York in their fight against the New York Central, New Haven, Lackawanna, Erie, Lehigh and Pennsylvania railroads. It means a saving of something like $100,000 a year in rates to the millers, who claimed that because of excessive charges their business was being stifled.

The Interstate Commerce Commission The Interstate Commerce Commission holds that the present rates on flour and other grain products from Buffalo to New York and New York points of 11 cents per 100 pounds, 13 cents to Boston and Boston points and 13½ cents to Sherbrooke points are excessive and ought not to exceed 10 cents to New York and New York points, 12 cents to Boston and Boston points and 2½ cents to Sherbrooke points.
